Israel To Stop Illegal Transfer Of Funds

The Israel Government will take all possible measures to stop "black market transfers" of foreign currency to Israel, Gideon Strauss, Consul for Economic Affairs in New York, announced.

"Some individuals and organizations have been transferring money at illegal rates, a practice which injures Israel's economy by depreciating its currency," Mr. Strauss said. "Naturally, it also injures the great majority of persons inside and outside the State who transact their business lawfully." He emphatically denied rumors that there is more than one legal rate of exchange for foreign currency, including dollars. All transfers and investments are approved only at the official rate for the Israel pound, $2.80.

Mr. Strauss also pointed out that no person either in his private capacity or as a member of any organization, philanthropic or otherwise, has ever been authorized to offer investors a special exchange rate. He declared that the full weight of the Israel Government's legal powers will be exercised against any persons who persist in illegal transactions of this kind.

To enforce its foreign currency regulations, the Israel Government will: 1. No longer approve the use of investors' funds for the purpose of importing commercial goods into the country. In other words, investors may transfer their funds only in the form of cash or equipment and materials for use in their own enterprises. 2. Deny to all investors involved in illegal currency transactions the benefits granted under the new law for the investment of private capital, recently approved by the Knesset [illegible] and, in addition, [illegible] 2. take criminal action against Israel citizens participating in illegal transfers.

Denial of the benefits of the investments law is a very serious matter, Mr. Strauss said, since this law offers new investors such significant advantages as withdrawal of profits, capital, interest and amortization annually in the currency of the original investment, up to 10% of the investment; income tax ceilings, for individual investors of no more than 25%; double normal amortization rates; elimination of customs duties on imports of machinery, equipment and raw materials; and refund of Israel corporation taxes in excess of credits allowed in the home countries.

Scores Hospitals For Grudging Care Of Aged

American hospitals are "very grudging" in offering their services to older persons, Dr. Martin Steinberg, executive director of Mount Sinai Hospital, charged in New York, at the American Geriatrics Society seventh annual meeting.

Many general hospitals, Dr. Steinberg said, tend to avoid aged patients by classifying them as "bad risks." He took general hospitals to task for considering many aged patients as cancer cases, rather than investigating their symptoms more closely as they might in the cases of younger patients. Nurses frequently complain about having to care for older patients, Dr. Steinberg added.

The speaker urged that the alleged attitude toward treating the aged in general hospitals be corrected by a systematic educational campaign. He suggested that as a more immediate solution each hospital have on its staff a group of "agents or attorneys" for the aged to plead their cases effectively and to make sure that they were "first-class citizens" in the medical attention they received.

The Mount Sinai director spoke at a panel discussion on "The Integration of Medical and Social Agencies in Community Planning for the Aged," at the Home for Aged and Infirm Hebrews, 121 West 107th Street. Dr. Robert S. Beckman, attending physician at the Peabody Home for Aged and Indigent Women, said that each home for the aged should be affiliated with a near-by chronic disease hospital.

Mrs. Amy Powell, director of the Fields Memorial of the Faculty Society of Greater Boston, said that the most important things a welfare agency could provide for older persons were security, "someone to understand" and friendship among persons of their own kind.

Mrs. Helen Lane, assistant director of the Chicago Community Project for the Aged, urged that community leaders be made aware that the attitudes and ideas of the aged could change and that working with the aged could be rewarding.

ISRAEL TO ADOPT CONSTITUTION BY EVOLUTION

Israel's Knesset voted 50 to 38 to adopt a state constitution by evolution over an unspecified period. The resolution stated: "The first Knesset delegates the Constitution, Legislation and Juridical Committee to prepare a draft constitution for the State. The constitution shall be constructed article by article in such a manner that each of them shall in itself constitute fundamental law. Each article shall be brought before the Knesset as the Committee completes its work and all articles together shall comprise the state constitution."

The Knesset also voted by 51 to 24 to increase the minimum age for marriage to 17. A citizenship bill circulated to members of the Knesset this week will soon be tabled formally by the Minister of Justice. The law would read: "Every Jew has the right to immigrate to Israel," thus reaffirming finally the ordinance enacted immediately after Israel's Proclamation of Independence which abolished the Mandatory's discrimination between legal and so-called "illegal" immigration. A certificate to this effect will be issued to every Jewish applicant unless the Ministry of Immigration is convinced that the applicant is hostile or a health or security menace.

Leaders Seek To Set Role Of Zionism Here

The Zionist movement must place primary emphasis on the unity of Jewish people and the continuity of Jewish tradition throughout the world, rather than on help to Israel alone, Rabbi Irving Miller, president of the American Jewish Congress, said in New York.

Rabbi Miller and Dr. Emanuel Neumann, former president of the Zionist Organization of America, speaking at the seventh annual conference of the Manhattan Region of the Z. O. A. at the Hotel Statler, outlined a new role for the American Zionist movement. Rabbi Miller rejected the concept that Zionism should be merely an instrument to aid Israel, while Dr. Neumann said the leaders of Israel cannot direct the Zionist movement throughout the world, reports the New York Herald Tribune.

The significance of the statements by the two Jewish leaders lies in the fact that since Israel was established many Jews have questioned whether there is further need for a Zionist movement, and if so, what its function should be. The primary objective of Zionism for decades had been the establishment of a Jewish state. Once that state was established there arose the question of the relationship of Jews in the Diaspora countries of the Jewish dispersion outside Israel) to the new state.

"I don't believe that the Zionist Organization can exist only to help Israel," Rabbi Miller said. "There are too many agencies already doing that. On the other hand, I want to repudiate the type of Zionism which is based on the negation of the Diaspora. The idea that a Zionist can only be one who prepares to go to Israel on the theory that Jewish life cannot be lived fully except in Israel, is wholly unacceptable."

After asserting that two cardinal points of Zionism have always been unity of the Jewish people and continuity of the Jewish tradition, Rabbi Miller said:

"The building of the Jewish national home has always been the most important means to the ends of Jewish survival and continuity. While Israel symbolizes these things, it is none the less true that for many generations a majority of Jews will live outside Israel. Consequently, I am interested in the survival of Jews outside as well as inside of Israel.

"Jews outside of Israel, in order to survive as Jews, must continue to be inspired by these two motifs —their relation to the Jews of the world and their role in the perpetuation of the Jewish tradition. Israel will, of course, be the primary symbol of these motifs, but only to the extent that it is translated to Jews in the Diaspora through the Zionist movement."

Dr. Neumann asserted that Jews in the Diaspora must do their own

World Group For Brotherhood Is Launched

The World Organization for Brotherhood, outreach of the National Conference of Christians and Jews in the United States, was launched at the four-day international meeting at Paris, France, with appeals by world leaders for greater fraternity among nations and men.

Addressing an evening session, Paul-Henri Spaak, former Socialist Premier of Belgium and now president of the Consultative Assembly of the Council of Europe, exhorted Socialists and Christians to unite in defense of a common civilization.

"If our goals on earth are truly the same—to organize human happiness through ever greater social justice—we must reach agreement on the means of achieving them and put an end to a deadly division," M. Spaak said. "It must be possible to overcome the historical antagonisms that may harden into outmoded clericalism and anti-clericalism."

M. Spaak said he could not help being encouraged by the Pope's message of June 2, 1948, in which Pius XII had recommended to Roman Catholics that they "join forces with those who, remaining outside their ranks, are none the less in agreement with the social teaching of the Catholic Church."

"Without education for liberty," M. Spaak concluded in regard to Europe's needs, "domination is possible but hope for human brotherhood is lost."

Former Premier Paul Reynaud of France told the session that the words of M. Spaak had made clear the gulf existing between the Eastern and Western parts of Europe, reports the New York Times.

"To be a Socialist in the East," said M. Renaud, "means putting up statues to Karl Marx, inventing historical materialism, persecuting the church openly or covertly and writing on banners: 'Religion is the opium of the people.' Here, on the contrary, you may hear a great Socialist-humanist call for a union of good faith between Christianity and Socialism."

The Most Rev. Emile Blanchet, rector of the Catholic Institute of Paris, read a message from Archbishop Maurice Feltin of Paris praising the World Organization for Brotherhood, with participation of the three principal religious communities in Europe, for rallying the most authentic spiritual forces. Msgr. Feltin asked that his message be read "to give evidence once again of the loyal and strong desire of the Roman Catholic Church to join it since efforts with those of all men of good will for the building of a better and healthier world."

Roger W. Straus, chairman of the board of American Smelting & Refining Company and a co-chairman of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, called for " a total approach to the problems of inter-group brotherhood — the arts, sciences, education and religion teamed together."

Other speakers were Dr. Arthur H. Compton, noted physicist and Chancellor of Washington University, St. Louis; Henry R. Luce, editor and publisher; and Spyros Skouras, president of Twentieth Century Fox.

More than 200 Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish leaders from the United States and all parts of Western Europe attended the opening of the conference convened as the first step toward establishing the World Organization for Brotherhood. The conference luncheon was presided over by Dr. Arthur H. Compton. Others present were Albert Plesman, president of the Royal Dutch Airlines, and Thomas E. Braniff, Catholic co-chairman of the National Conference of Christian and Jews.

Dr. Compton, a former Protestant co-chairman of the National Conference, said "the present moment is especially timely for a world organization to bring together those who are concerned with promoting the brotherhood of man under the Fatherhood of God."

"The immediate occasion for bringing such an organization into being," Dr. Compton said, "is the activity of powerful groups that are attempting to cause dissension among those whose efforts are directed toward making the lives of men and women worth while."

"We represent," he said, "those who consider it a matter of great significance that in the sight of

New U.S. Law Expands DP Entries; Offers Refuge To Other Victims

The American franchise for liberty and a home was held out to additional men, women and children as President Truman signed the Displaced Persons Bill on June 16. Refuge to virtually every kind of victim of Europe's wars and persecutions is offered under the new law, which expands to 415,744 the total of those admitted or to be admitted under the special post-war legislation.

The bill rubbed out the provisions that have been denounced as un-American in the Displaced Persons Law of 1948, reports the New York Times. It asked only that the new immigrants be as industrious and loyal as their countrymen who came here in past generations.

It opened the gates wide for Jews stigmatized by Hitler, to Catholics who have crept out from under Russia's iron curtains, to Italians who fled Fascism, to the Volksdeutsch who were turned out of the Sudetenland, Yugoslavia, Hungary, Rumania, Poland, and the Baltic countries early in the war era, to orphans, and to those in a few other categories of human misery.

The bill provides for the issuance of a grand total of 400,744 visas, including 172,230 which had been issued up to May 31, and for granting permanent entry to 15,000 students and other persons already here on temporary permits who cannot return to their homes without danger of death or persecution. The over-all total is 415,744.

The new law primarily offers a home to 341,000 displaced persons, the largest category affected. Officials familiar with the intent and provisions of the law believe that it will lead to the effectual emptying of the displaced persons camps of Europe.

They estimate that 300,000 displaced persons are in these camps now. In addition to those who have already received its visas the United States would take about 120,000 of the 300,000. The others would go to Australia, Canada and South America.

Officials expect that about 20,000 persons will be left as a tragic remnant unwanted or ineligible to emigrate for various reasons. These will somewhat have to be assimilated in Europe.

The eligible entrants under the new law may be divided into four main groups as follows:

1. The basic group of 341,000 refugees, compared with 205,000 provided for in the 1948 law.
2. The 54,744 so-called expellees or persons of German ethnic countries known as the Volksdeutsch. This compares with 27,000 permitted to enter under the old law. Under the old law persons in this group had to pay for their own transportation and many could not leave the camps. The new law gives them travel on the same basis as the basic D. P. group.
3. Orphans, 5,000 of them from eighteen Western European countries, including Germany and Austria, and from Italy, Greece and Turkey.
4. The 15,000 persons here on temporary visas who may qualify for permanent admission.

In the first and largest group 32,000 may be subdivided thus:

1. The 18,000 Polish veterans of

Special care should be taken of milk in the summer months. It should never be allowed to stand in the hot sun after the milkman has left it on the step. The bright sunlight and heat will destroy the riboflavin content of the milk and will encourage the growth of bacteria. Move the milk quickly to a cool, dark place.

MARRIAGES

STEIN-WOLFE

The marriage of Miss Esther Wolfe, of New Rochelle, N. Y., daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Max Wolfe, of Toronto and Ottawa, to Harry Stein, of Toronto, took place on Tuesday, June 6, at the home of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Rashkis, 4 Castleview Avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stein will be at home after July 1, at 63 Claxton Boulevard.

WRIGHT-KOHAN

The marriage of Leola, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Mitchell Kohan, 600 Bathurst Street, to David I. Wright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Wright, of Hamilton, took place on May 24, at two o'clock, in Holy Blossom Temple. Rabbi Abraham L. Feinberg officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was in blush-white satin. Fashioned with square neckline, fitted bodice tucked with rhinestones and pearls, and short sleeves, having matching gloves designed with rhinestones and pearls, her gown was floor-length, with softly-gathered skirt. A tiara of rhinestones and pearls held her tulle illusion veil, and she carried a white Bible adorned with white orchids. Mrs. Maurice Shapero was matron of honour. She wore a gown of silk organza, having a white background and gold-coloured design running through it, with bouffant skirt, and large natural-coloured picture hat, and carried a cascade of yellow roses. Leonard Williams was best man. Fred Kohan, Bernard Staiman, Irving Shenderoff, Isadore Greenberg, Max Matchin, and Morris Wright were ushers. At the reception in the Roof Gardens, Royal York Hotel, Mrs. Kohan wore a gown of French-blue crepe with inserts of Alencon lace, matching tulle hat, and mauve orchid corsage. Mrs. Wright wore a gown of ashes-of-roses satin, with a scattered design of pale sequins, matching hat of balibuntal straw, and mauve orchid corsage. For the trip to Miami Beach, Florida, the bride wore blue and navy tie-silk taffeta, with matching felt hat combined with flowers and black lace. They will reside in Hamilton. Out-of-town guests were: Dr. and Mrs. A. Silverman, Mrs. L. Littman, of Detroit, Mich.; I. Wright, of Charleston, South Carolina; and Mrs. L. Chankin, of Montreal, Que.

SHULMAN-BOSSIN

The marriage of Gloria, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Bossin, 19 Peveril Hill Road North, to Dr. Morton P. Shulman, son of Mrs. Nettie Shulman, 167 High Park Avenue, and the late David Shulman, took place on May 30, at six o'clock, at Beth Sholom Synagogue, with Rabbi David Monson officiating, assisted by Cantor Samuel Stolnitz. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a white nylon net gown, designed with deep, oval neckline, edged with ruching of the same material, long shirred sleeves, pointed at the wrists, with buttons to the elbow, shirred torso-length bodice, and full skirt over taffeta, caught with sprays of lilies of the valley along the hemline. Her heirloom tulle veil, used by the groom's family for years, was held by a small off-the-face bonnet faced with lilies-of-the-valley, and she carried a bouquet of white roses, carnations, and lilies-of-the-valley. Miss Pat Ciglen was maid of honour. Wearing a turquoise-blue nylon gown, fashioned with shirred bodice, and full skirt, with matching taffeta bolero jacket, she had a large picture hat of turquoise-blue nylon net, and carried a bouquet of yellow and varicoloured spring flowers. Mrs. Allan Lewis and Mrs. Philip Klotz were bridesmaids, wearing gowns identical with that of the maid of honour, with similar bouquets. Rosanne Goulding was flower girl in pink net over pink taffeta, with fitted bodice, puffed sleeves, and full skirt, and she carried a basket of rose petals. The ushers were Sidney Bossin, Burt Fleisher, Fred Fink, and Dr. Philip Klotz. Robert Bossin was ring-bearer in full dress. Mrs. Bossin wore a gown of sky-blue, having a lace bodice, and full sheer skirt, designed with full pink roses down one side, also matching pink gloves, and corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Shulman wore a grey chiffon gown with fitted pink bodice, and full skirt, with pink mohair hat, matching gloves, and corsage of pink roses. For the trip to Scarboro Manor, the bride wore a cherry-red light weight wool suit. The couple will reside in Toronto. Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. L. Goldman, of Florida; Mr. and Mrs. M. The marriage of Rebecca, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Leventhal, 233 Beatrice Street, to Joseph Zon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Zon, 3330 Dundas Street West, took place on May 28, at Shaw Street Synagogue. Rabbi David Monson officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Wearing white satin and lace, fashioned with Peter Pan collar, long, gathered sleeves, fitted bodice, and full satin skirt, with lace peplum, that extended into a long train, she had a three-quarter-length tulle illusion veil, bound in satin around the edge, and caught to a bonnet of satin and net. She carried a white Bible, adorned with white roses, and streamers of lilies-of-the-valley. Mrs. Samuel Brown was matron of honour. On a cocoa-coloured strapless net-over-taffeta gown, with matching jacket, and gloves, she had a large yellow net picture hat, trimmed with a yellow rose, and carried a cascade of coral-coloured roses. Miss Leah Leventhal was bridesmaid, in a gown of pink net, having a low round neckline, and full skirt, and carried a cascade of pink roses. Miss Betty Leventhal was junior bridesmaid, in a red and white taffeta gown, with Peter Pan collar and full skirt, and carried a cascade of yellow and red roses. Trudy Brown and Rena Leventhal were flower girls, dressed alike in yellow net over white lace hooped petticoats, and carried white baskets of white and yellow rose petals. Sydney Zon was best man. The ushers were: Morton Bernstein, Saul Lewis, Sydney Finkelstein, Roy Silver, Macy Silver, Robert Edson, Harold Levine, and Sydney Zone. Joel Shapero was ring-bearer in full dress. Mrs. Leventhal wore royal-blue crepe, trimmed with beading, and corsage of red roses; Mrs. Zon, a cocoa-coloured and lace gown, with corsage of coral-coloured roses. For the trip to Buffalo, N.Y., the bride wore a cocoa-coloured gabardine suit, with beige topcoat, white bonnet, and cocoa-coloured accessories, with corsage of bronze-coloured roses. The couple are residing at 233 Beatrice Street. Mr. and Mrs. I. Leifer, Mr. and Mrs. M. Zeplowitz, of Buffalo, N.Y.; Mr. and B. Blumenfeld, of Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. S. "SPORTSMANSHIP IN CANADA UNLIMITED"

Fourteen thousand track fans packed the Melbourne, Australia, stadium. It was 1934 . . . year of the city's centennial. To celebrate the event, crack collegiate athletes from Canada, Australia and New Zealand were competing in a special sports festival.

Canada's 12-man team—largest of its kind to represent the nation abroad—took top honours. They won 8 of 11 events and shattered three Australian track records. Later, in New Zealand, they repeated their feat . . . taking 10 out of 12 top honours to make a clean sweep of the Dominions down under.

Close teamwork and sportsmanship have earned many firsts for Canada's track stars. Sportsmanship and teamwork help you, too—in work and play. Together they keep your scope for opportunity in Canada . . . unlimited.

TIYUL BA'ARETZ

BY FRED BIDERMAN

Living in a kibbutz located in the remoteness of the Negev and having as yet seen little of the country, I always look forward to a few days of travel. Travel is always understood in the conventional sense of "tramping" and aside from ordinary mortals who frequently use this means of transportation, there are hordes of soldiers and kibbutzniks who travel this way because other means take money. To me nothing reflects more strikingly the exciting times through which we are passing than the restless crowds that stir along the highways. I had seen revealing, amusing, and some deeply moving incidents during my brief travels, so it was with high hopes of adventure (and a kit bag full of sandwiches) that I set out one morning on my way to Kfar Blum, located in Upper Galilee.

My journey begins at the outskirts of Beer Sheba. Amongst the group waiting for a ride, I recognized a casual acquaintance from my home city. He was an ardent Communist when I knew him and we had on a few occasions exchanged views as a result of which a life-long bond was not created. He is one person I had a right not to expect to meet here — and yet there he stands, a soldier in the army of Israel. I approach and introduce myself. He remembers me in a vague sort of way. We exchange the usual questions: How long have you been here, what are your impressions, are you planning to remain?

With an air gallante he says, "Now that the job we came to do is finished, I'm clearing out."

I ask him, "Did you pick up any Hebrew?" I find this a good index to a person's view of his place in Israel. He tells me that it is not necessary to know Hebrew. ("You can get along very well with Yiddish and English"). With concealed resentment I agree, but add that you really can't enter into the spirit of this country or understand those who shaped it without a knowledge of the language. He is going to make a comment, when a truck pulls up and we all pile in. It is difficult to continue the conversation in the crowded noisy truck.

As we spread towards Tel Aviv, I wonder about this boy and what brought him here. I suppose he came because he felt it was also his war. Though I imagine that several high ideological hurdles had to be overcome before that realization dawned on him. And now he is going home because he feels he has done his duty, and thinks he knows everything about Israel . . . because he has seen almost all of it.

We pass an elderly Jew on a wagon drawn by a donkey. The wagon is loaded with cement block. I wonder whether that brief glimpse evokes the same feelings in him as it does in me. I am tempted to say something to him about the renaissance and normality of a people, but desist. The thought occurs to me that of those who come here of their own free will, only such will remain who can sense the spirit of this great drama of a people being born anew. We part at a street corner in Tel Aviv. "Remember me to the old gang," I shout to him. He nods his head and is gone.

I always find it exciting to walk along Allenby Street. I feel like a country hick in the big city for a day. It takes me a moment to realize that is what I am now. Stop at an outer cafe for a drink and watch the crowd drifting by. A well-dressed woman says something to her little fellow in German and he answers her in Ivrit. The galut world visibly disappearing. I look into a few book store windows, almost every other place is a book store on Allenby, and I am tempted to go into one. But I want to get to Haifa before nightfall, so I move on.

Outside the city the military police stop all vehicles and those that have space are soon filled from the waiting queue. I stand in line and wait my turn. A girl in uniform standing next to me takes out a chocolate bar from her bag, breaks it and passes it around. I have seen that happen a number of times in various places and always I am moved by such warm-hearted generosity. But let no one think that only angels dwell in Israel.

I was waiting amongst a group for a very long time to get a lift out of Haifa, when two boys newly arrived in Israel suggested that I join them in stealing an auto. I am quite sure they were in earnest — an observation that is verified by the large number of auto thefts that have been occurring recently.

I finally get a lift with about fifty other people, and I push on to Haifa. There are stretches of the road that pass through the orange groves and the air around that area is like a fine perfume. The crowd makes all kinds of ecstatic noises to show its pleasure and the mood is high. A few people start a song and the rest join in. Near Haifa we pass an Arab village and someone shouts an insult at some Arab women by the roadside. The fellow is told that he is behaving childishly and he answers that he hates every single Arab. Someone remarks that the Arabs in this village have always been on excellent terms with us.

A third person asks the offender how long he has been in the country that he already has managed to acquire a hatred for all the Arabs. He replies that he has been here long enough and he will go on insulting Arabs whenever he pleases. His bellicose attitude rouses resentment and everyone falls silent. The silence is like a deadly rebuff from those present. His action has cast a slight gloom over everyone. A moment later he says that they killed his brother. No one makes a comment.

Walking through Haifa . . . Friends tell me it's a wonder city — but these hilly streets leave me exhausted. I would like to stop over for a week and explore Haifa but at the moment my main worry is where I shall find a place to sleep. Suddenly a chap from the other side of the street is calling my name and waving at me. We came over on the same ship and knew each other casually, but here we embrace like bosom companions. We exchange information on what we have been doing since we parted from the ship and I tell him about my immediate predicament.

He invites me to spend the evening with him . . . . He will look after supper and lodgings. "Fair enough," I said and off we go to a restaurant. He knows very little about the kibbutz and is eager to hear from me what it's all about. So I give him a general picture and make some comments upon my own experience. He tells me that he is working in a garage, likes the work and the people he is with, but says that he feels very lonely here. "Why not try a kibbutz and see whether you fit in?" I suggest. "A person with a very useful trade such as yours will be an asset to any group." The thought interests him and he asks if he can come down to the kibbutz where I am living.

"You certainly may," I tell him. After the meal we go for a walk and I talk to him about our chevra and the present situation of the kibbutz. He is genuinely interested and asks intelligent questions. We return to his hotel and he secures a bed for me. The bed is in the corridor with two other beds — Israel is a crowded country today.

I am up early, eager to be on my way, but my acquaintance is already up and he insists that we have breakfast together. On parting he says, "I've had a wonderful evening and I hope I see you again." I invite him to visit my kibbutz so that I can have an opportunity to return his warm hospitality. He is young and far from his home city of Los Angeles; never has been a member of a Zionist Youth movement; knows few people here . . . and life is a little difficult for him at present. But something keeps him here. I remember his words, "It gives me such a good feeling to be walking through the streets of a Jewish city."

The lifts out of Haifa were short and few. I had almost given up hope of getting to Kfar Blum by evening. I was set to spend the night at the new American kibbutz north of Acre, when a truck pulled up going to Safad. Climbing the mountain road that leads to Safad you have before you some of the most enchanting scenery in Israel. The towering rock-covered hills speak of antiquity. You feel yourself passing through history.

After we have climbed to a considerable height we gain a view of Lake Kinneret in the distance. Its glistening waters are cradled by the surrounding mountains. In the vastness of America this would be but another of its countless mountain lakes. But to us Kinneret is like a precious jewel and our loveliest songs are sung to it. I am reminded of my friend back home who used to sing those songs so well and I wonder if he will ever see this view.

A few hair-pin turns near the top of the mountain and Safad lies before us. The town rests against the slope of a steep mountain. How and why do they build cities on such slopes I wonder — forgetting that Safad is a very ancient town. It is a beautiful sight to behold — as though resting on top of the world. The ideal place for one inclined towards a quiet contemplative life. At the outskirts of the town there is a road leading to Rosh Pinah and I get off there. An army tender picks me up and we swiftly glide down the mountain road towards Rosh Pinah.

Now that I am in Rosh Pinah I am at ease, because I am certain to get to my destination before evening. I walk through the town which consists of an army garage, a bus station and the inevitable police station. Wherever there were three houses the British seem to have their imposing fortress. Now our army is making good use of them. I wait for a tramp with an army officer. He tells me he is going to visit his girl who lives in a kibbutz. When he hears I come from Canada, he asks all kinds of questions — they boil down to one rhetorical question, "Don't you think we have a wonderful little country?" I wave my hand around and say to him, "The important thing is that its ours — that makes it so wonderful."

He smiles at me in a way that tells me how much he appreciates my comment. A jeep stops and in it there is room for one more. The driver says in English that he is going to Kfar Blum. "That's where I'm going," I shout, and jump in the back. The jeep roars away and I wave to my soldier friend.

Besides the driver, who turns out to be a South African with a bushy beard and merry blue eyes, there sits an American. He has a leg missing and in back of the jeep there is a folded wheel chair. He does not say much and I wonder what story he might tell. I sit in the back with a girl from Brooklyn. All of them are, of course, in uniform. "Member of some Zionist Youth movement?" I ask her. She says, "No." I still am not accustomed to the thought that many of those who came during the fighting were not Zionists, but just Jews.

Do you know anyone at Kfar Blum?" I ask. "No," she answers, "we were told that there were Americans living there, so we decided to come up for the week-end." We stop beside a bank of flowers, bright red poppies, and each of us picks a bunch and we take pictures with snow-covered Mt. Hermon for a background.

We begin to discuss the pleasant arrangement in this country of so many settlements each with its doors open to you at any time, and in each of them you can stay for several days and be an honored guest. The South African says, "This is the only country in the world where you can live all your life without working. Just move from settlement to settlement, and when you complete the circuit, start over again. And you will be considered a gentleman if you visit each place once every three years," he adds.

"That's a wonderful career you've mapped out for yourself," the American says, and we laugh. Just at dusk, we turn into the last bumpy stretch of road that leads into Kfar Blum. Kibbutzniks are walking with their children by the roadside and at the entrance to the settlement there is a group waiting for the evening bus that will bring the mail and visitors. Amongst the crowd I see my brother and my little niece. I go over to greet them.

Ailments such as coughs, colds and other respiratory infections are spread through the unguarded coughs, sneezes and heavy breathing of infected persons. When you have a cough or cold, you owe it to yourself and your fellow workers to remain at home for a day or so until the period of greatest danger is passed. Good general physical health is your best defence against colds. Practise regular health habits for good health.

Avoid the extremes of fashion; select the golden mean. That is good taste the philosophers say. Anything overdone is in bad taste.

Because a man is usually more heavily built than a woman, he requires more food to nourish his body adequately. Because a woman is usually more delicately built than a man, she requires less food to nourish her body adequately. Both require the same kinds of food. Not enough of another will leave the body in need of nourishment even though we may eat heartily. A balanced diet is no more expensive. It is more varied, more pleasing and more tasty. And it keeps the body machine in good running order.

Glare from polished tables or desks, or those that have shiny glass tops is harmful to the eyes, similar to the glare from water or snow, or from bright sunlight itself. Colored glasses provide good relief from such glare, but they should not be worn all the time — that is, when there is no glare from which protection is required.

It is known that digestive juices operate more efficiently when diluted and, states the Department of National Health and Welfare, water taken at mealtime is not harmful unless it is used merely to swill down unchewed food. However, water with meals should be only cool enough to make it palatable.

Israel To Build "Kfar Truman"

The establishment of the "Harry S. Truman village" in Israel was announced at the "Land for Israel" dinner of the New England Jewish National Fund. Vice-President Alben W. Barkley, who addressed the 1,500 guests in Boston, Mass., accepted honorary chairmanship of the project. It is under the auspices of the Jewish National Fund of America.

Mr. Barkley expressed the hope that "the agricultural colony bearing the name of the President will serve not only as a testimonial to President Truman's efforts in behalf of the State of Israel but also as a firm link binding together the oldest democracy in the New World with the youngest democracy born after the World War in solid union against all aggression."

"Kfar Truman," as the village will be known in Israel, is to be established on 760 acres on the Lydda plains, near the Lydda Airport, not far from Tel Aviv. The settlers will be native-born Israel veterans who distinguished themselves in their war for independence.

Fred Monosson, Jewish National Fund chairman for New England and national treasurer of the Zionist Organization of America, announced that New England's Jewry had subscribed the first $100,000 toward a national goal of $500,000 for Truman village. He read a letter from Mr. Truman granting permission to use his name for the new Israeli colony.

"I am highly honored and appreciate very much what you are proposing to do," the President wrote to Dr. Harris J. Levine, head of the Jewish National Fund of America. Gov. Paul A. Dever, of Massachusetts; Mayor John B. Hynes, of Boston; and Mendel Fisher, executive director of the Jewish Fund, also endorsed the village project.

Mr. Barkley said that Israel, "the smallest democracy in the world, is engaged in the same task as our own beloved country in helping to create human freedom and to build in the Near East a civilization that is consecrated to the highest concept of man."

Cooking with care is often the secret of success in getting the most food value from vegetables. They should be cooked in a small amount of boiling water with the lid on. If they are cooked too long or in too much water much of the food value will be lost. Vegetables taste and look better when they are cooked properly.

JDC Aids Kurdish Jews Who Fled From Iran

A emergency grant of $25,000 to provide immediate food and housing for 2,500 Kurdish Jews who recently fled to Teheran to escape anti-Jewish excesses in northwest Iran, has been made by the Joint Distribution Committee, following an on-the-spot inspection of the refugees' plight by Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, director-general of the American relief agency which is supported by the United Jewish Appeal. Edward M. M. Warburg, JDC Chairman, said in New York that Dr. Schwartz, who arrived in Teheran two weeks ago, had cabled that the refugees were "in a deplorable condition facing starvation and epidemics."

About 1,800 of the refugees are camped in a Jewish cemetery outside Teheran, while some 700 are crowded in the local synagogue. Native Jews of Teheran, undertook to raise an additional $25,000 to add to JDC's emergency contribution for the refugees. Dr. Schwartz reported that the total $50,000 will cover the most essential needs of Jewish refugees for a period of only sixty days and called on American Jews to make possible further aid through support of the United Jewish Appeal.

Dr. Schwartz reported, "The only solution to the plight of the Kurdish Jews in Teheran is their quick removal to Israel." The present funds will cover the provision of food, clothing, medical care, showers and toilets. Officials in New York estimated that it would take an additional $250,000 to bring the refugees to Israel by plane. The bulk of the Kurdish Jews have come into Teheran in the last two months after walking some 300 miles from their homes in mountainous northwestern Iran. Kurdistan, from which they came, is a tribal area that spreads over portions of Iraq, Turkey, and Iran. Government authorities have permitted the refugees to take haven in Teheran, and have been of considerable aid.

Recent outbreaks against Jews by fanatical Kurdish tribesmen have resulted in the death of some twelve Jews, according to one report, accompanied by pillaging and violence. Jews have lived for several hundred years in Kurdistan, an area where communications with the outside world are few, but little is known about their history or present-day life. The refugees who have come into Teheran report, however, that about 20,000 Jews live in Iranian Kurdistan, and that for the most part they are farmers, shepherds, and artisans. Stanley Abramovitch, JDC country director for Iran, will continue to supervise the program for Kurdish Jews, as well as for the needy among Iranian Jews.

PAGEANT CELEBRATES ANCIENT FESTIVAL

The ancient Hebrew festival of Bikkurim— the bringing of the first fruits of the year to the House of the Lord — was re-enacted in New York on the Central Park Mall before 12,000 persons.

Two thousand children from Hebrew schools and Jewish youth organizations in the metropolitan area participated in the celebration, which began with a procession to the band stand in which youngsters carried American and Israeli flags.

In re-enacting the festival, children in costumes of ancient times carried to an altar baskets laden with artifical fruits and vegetables. A high priest accepted the offerings and sang a prayer thanking God for "the bounty and good life He has granted the Jewish people."

While an orchestra played background music, six white doves were released from small cages as a symbol of peace and good will. Celia Adler, star of the Yiddish stage, and Rober. Haag, radio actor, provided the narration for the pageant. The two-and-a-half-hour program was held under the auspices of the Jewish National Fund.

Don't be deceived by reports that pasteurized milk lacks the full food value of raw milk. Scientific tests have shown that pasteurization has little or no effect on the food value of the milk and that pasteurized milk is just as easy to digest as the raw product. Pasteurization is the only safeguard against the common milk-borne diseases. Insist on pasteurized milk.

Teen-agers are noted for their tremendous appetites and for snacking between meals. If chosen carefully these snacks can help to provide some of the body-building and energy-giving foods that growing youngsters need. Some of the better "snacking suggestions" include fruits, citrus fruit juices, milk, sandwiches with protein-rich filling and ice cream.

JUNE 23, 1950 VOL. XXXII, No. 38

OUR BELIEF IN GOD

BY RABBI DR. G. SALZBERGER, OF THE NEW LIBERAL JEWISH CONGREGATION, IN LONDON, ENGLAND

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, who made heaven and earth. He will not suffer thy foot to be moved: he that keepeth thee will not slumber. Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep. The Lord is thy keeper, the Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand. The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night. The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil; he shall preserve thy soul. The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth, and even for ever more." (Psalm 121)

This is a song of degrees or, better, a song of pilgrimage, sung as an antiphony, as the procession of Jewish pilgrims approached the hills surrounding the Holy City of Jerusalem. It is more than a poem, it is a psalm, that is, the outpouring of a religious heart. What impresses us most is not its rhythm, not even its words, but the faith in God which reverberates through them.

The Hebrew expression for faith is Emunah, the root of which is Amen: certain, firm. For the most certain certainty for a religious man is that there is a God. Without this certainty, he cannot believe in the existence of a world, nor in the security of life. It is true, Judaism is not founded on faith alone: to do justly and to love mercy are its first principles.

In the name of God, the prophet Isaiah says to the sinners of his own people. "Wash you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil; learn to do well; seek justice, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow." Yet, the same prophet puts before his people those other words: "Im lo taaminuki lo teamenu: If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established."

Do we really believe? You may say: Who can expect us to believe in the miracles of the Biblical stories, in Paradise or in the Ark of Noah, in Balaam's talking ass, or in the ascension of Elijah? I do not expect you to, although all these stories and many others like them are lovely parables illustrating a religious or moral truth. You may say: shall we believe in the resurrection of the dead, in a hereafter with reward for the pious and punishment for the evil-doers? Then I shall answer: Judaism does not rest upon dogmas of this kind.

But let me ask you: Do you believe in a holy will, which created the world, which rules the earth in justice and mercy? Do you believe in a purpose in human life, in a Messianic era as the goal of history? Do you believe in a personal God? Do you believe in Him with firm unshakeable faith, as our forefathers did? Is our faith that quiet confidence with which the Psalmist sings: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, who made heaven and earth?"

You may object: The non-Jewish world around us does not believe either. It is true, Christian ministers also complain that their churches are empty, that faith in their Christian dogmas is lacking, that family life is without religious ceremony. But have you noticed the consequences? There is a dangerous decline in morality and a dangerous increase of superstition. Nature abhors a vacuum; that is a law of the human soul. Where there is no belief in God, there is belief in a blind fate or in substitutes for religion, like fascism or communism. People believe in signs and numbers, they believe in spiders and cats: the only belief they do not cherish is belief in God, although it is much sounder and nobler.

If you look around, you will perceive a great desire for true religion among men. We may be sure that the new world emerging from two terrible wars will not be founded upon mere politics or economics, but upon religion. Yet even if all the peoples of the world were to reject religion, should not we Jews cling to ours?

What did Jesus, a son of our people, tell his disciples? "Ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost his savour wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out and to be trodden under foot of men. Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father, who is in heaven."

I think he was right and is still right. We Jews do not usually hide our light under a bushel, but it is the light of our intelligence, of our sagacity and wit. It is the light which does not warm. Why do we hide the grand light of our religion, we, who are called — as our prophet says — to become "a light of the nations" in order "to open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness, out of the prison house." (Isaiah 42, 7)? "Ye are my witnesses," says God to Israel.

You may ask: how can we regain our lost faith? Either we have it, you think, or we have it not. Certainly no-one can be forced to believe; a faith forced upon a man is a contradiction in terms. One cannot learn religion as one acquires ordinary knowledge. Is there any way in which one can try to come to a real and unshakeable faith?

I think, first of all, we must have time to find our own soul, which is our most particular property, our most precious jewel. We have time for many things, for our business, for our meals, for reading our daily newspaper, for the wireless, the cinema, for the care of our body, but we have not a quarter-of-an-hour a day to listen to the voice of our soul. And religious faith is a matter of the human soul.

Most of us try to escape from ourselves by incessantly busying ourselves, no matter with what. Even when silent we always speak in thought. We do not know the depth of meditation or the inner peace of the Sabbath and, therefore, we live on the surface only and on the outskirts of life. We must learn to be alone with our soul, without boredom. That is one way. And the other is: so to live that we can believe in ourselves, in the meaning and value of our life.

When we can trust ourselves, not so much our intellectual abilities or capacities, but our character, then we will believe in others, and through the belief in others we will finally regain belief in God, in whose image man has been created. The best proof, says Leo Baeck, of the existence of God is a man who walks in God's way, i.e. the ways of justice and mercy. Not words, nor the most eloquent sermons, are so convincing of the truth of religion as our deeds.

In these two ways: in the care of our own soul and in the moral attitude towards our neighbour, we can regain the faith in God which we lost in the turmoil of our time. It will not be the faith of our childhood, that simple, easy faith inherited from the past but not become a personal conviction, able to withstand the storms of human life. "What you have inherited from your fathers," says Goethe, "you must yourselves earn if you are really to possess it." Only he who has earned his faith will understand and will pray with a joyful heart, as the psalmist of old chanted: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, who made heaven and earth."

WORLD GROUP

God it is man, not the state, that counts. We see ourselves in an epic struggle to retain for men the right to choose their own way of life and their right to seek the spiritual values they consider good."

There were 155 men and women delegates from twelve nations. The conference endorsed the constitution of the organization and approved a charter for chapters to be formed throughout the world, except in Communist-governed countries. A committee of educators within the conference did, however, pass a resolution to the effect that no restrictions should be made against persons in those countries who may sympathize with and share brotherhood ideals.

World Brotherhood, now supported by Protestants, Roman Catholics, and Jews, as an outgrowth of the National Conference of Catholics and Jews in the United States asked that organization take the first steps toward formation of a world organization among persons pledged to work for tolerance and brotherly harmony.

Notable persons of many countries who attended the meeting, presided over by Dr. Compton, were appointed to the interim committee that will cooperate in the foundation's work, according to the New York Times.

"It has been my privilege to share in bringing great new powers of nature to the service of man," said Dr. Compton. "I am impressed by the fact that these powers make possible a great era of prosperity. In order that this goal shall be realized, however, it is necessary that we agree upon common human goals. It is to this end that we today have established World Brotherhood."

Dr. Compton said that men and women throughout the world were seeking a common basis for working in harmony. Such a basis is afforded by agreement on the importance of the individual and his free growth.

thinking and arrive at their own conclusions, according to the New York Herald Tribune. Israeli leaders are too preoccupied with their own tasks, he said, to spare the time and effort to solve the problems of the Diaspora.

"The salvation of organized Zionism will not come out of Zion," he said.

"Prior to the establishment of the Jewish state," Dr. Neumann continued, "the World Zionist Organization and the Jewish Agency were internationally recognized as representing both the Diaspora and the Yishuv (the Jewish community in Palestine). This is no longer the case. The Yishuv is now fully organized and represented by the Parliament and the government of Israel.

"The character which the Zionist movement must therefore assume henceforth is essentially that of a body representing the Jews of the Diaspora co-operating to assist in the further development of Israel and their own cultural life. If this conception of the Zionist movement as primarily a Diaspora movement oriented toward Israel, is adopted, it will have far reaching and wholesome implications and enable us to arrive at logical and sensible conclusions regarding its programs, functions and future constitution."

Jacques Torczyner was unanimously re-elected president of the Manhattan Zionist Region, which has 10,000 members.

Unfounded rumor declares that pasteurization of milk changes its nutritional value and makes the milk less palatable and harder to digest. But from practical experience, nutrition experts have concluded that pasteurization causes no appreciable change in the milk's nutritional value and actually renders the very valuable protein of milk more easily digested.
